Manisha Gulati is an artist by passion who is trained academically as a civil engineer. Manisha seems to be fascinated by playing with vibrant tones and bold strokes and depicts wide range of subjects. She is deeply impressed by Indian heritage structures and always wondered to give them life which she felt initially was impossible few years back. However, over the years she worked and gave shape to her imagination; She paints apsaras and goddesses from temples, as if she is giving them life with ease by creating hues and vibrancy.

She used an element of abstraction while painting her subjects and gives them a feel of roughness, rustiness and carelessness. Amongst the chaotic artwork and aggressive facial expression, the viewer might visualise the beauty and purity each character holds.
